The Best Of Times

*Our Memories of Yesterday
Will Last a Lifetime*

*We'll Take the Best-
Forget the Rest*

*And Some Day We'll Find
These are the Best of Times.*

On Saturday, April 30, 1988, the Junior Class of Coventry High School anxiously entered the Rocky Point Palladium for their Junior Promenade. Nervously they walked through the receiving line, not knowing what to expect. The couples were comforted by their Junior Class President, Mathew Mathews, and the social committee chairperson, Kelly Egan, who were awaiting them at the end of the receiving line. Before dinner the couples were photographed. Following dinner, the couples waited for the crowning of the 1988 Prom Queen. The candidates, Jessica Eastman, Karen Egan, Kelly Egan, Jennifer Howe, and Debborah Szczsponik, were escorted to the stage by their dates as the song of their choice was played in the background. The girl's anxiously awaited as Christine Gosselin, the reigning Prom Queen, crowned as the ne queen, Jessica Eastman. Jessie and her escort, Howie Hague, danced the Queen's Dance. Afterward, the Junior Class enjoyed the music of the Entertainer until the closing song The Best of Times was played. Although the Prom ended at 11:45, for most the fun did not. The first Post-Prom party was held at the high school between 12:30 and 2:00. Students could dance to the music of WCVY in the cafeteria, or play basketball or volleyball in the gymnasium. Popcorn and pizza were served and prizes were given away. Eventually, the food ran out and all of the prizes were won. Even though the evening ended, the memories will last forever for the Class of 1989.

CLASS HISTORY

On September 4, 1985, we, the Class of 1989, entered Coventry High School as wimpy, insignificant Freshmen. In our stiff, new, two-toned jeans, our snow-white Reeboks, and our starched-to-the-point-of-pain shirts, we thought we were the best thing since sliced bread. Nervously, we tiptoed to the Freshmen hallway to cower among our friends from the Junior High. After all, they say that there is safety in numbers. Upon receiving our IBM-processed pink guides to life, we wandered aimlessly about, looking for the third floor and the pool. By the end of our first day in what seemed to be the largest building in the universe, we had been tripped, taunted, tricked, traumatized, and trampled by the upperclassmen. As the year progressed, this list was condensed to one word: tolerated. After a few weeks, we managed to dodge unidentified flying objects in the cafeteria, to keep up with the ever-changing fads, and to elect our class officers. Because we still needed a great deal of guidance, as do all Freshmen, we elected Michelle Langlois to help us out. Because of her and our class advisor, Mrs. Tracy, we survived our dreaded Freshman year. Believe it or not, we actually had some fun along the way, like at the very successful Freshmen dance. Finally, we closed our first year in the high school with a sigh of regret and took off for the summer to regain some of our lost sanity.

When we entered into our Sophomore year, we expelled a sigh of relief because we were no longer the unsophisticated, unimportant, unwanted Freshmen. Suddenly, we came to the realization that we could finally do the teasing instead of being teased! And believe me—we tortured the Class of 1990! Just because we could step on the Freshmen, that in no way meant we were important. We had a long way to go before we were considered REAL people. Lynne DeCiantis was elected Class President to aid us in our journey. Although Lynne did a great deal to make a name for Sophomores, each of us had to participate in order to make a significant mark on the school. Suddenly, our eyes were opened to clubs, millions of them! As a result, we joined any and everything. We found ourselves in Computer Club, even though we had no idea how to turn one on. Math Club sounded good until we found out that we actually had to DO math. And yearbook seemed IDEAL until we realized that it was more than just cutting and pasting pictures. But hey, at least we joined and...attempted clubs. Basically, the Sophomore year was a time for scoping out football games, joining the honors program, attending dances, and establishing social status in general. As a result, we glided through our Sophomore year, eager to experience the thrills and opportunities of the Junior Year.

The Junior year, however, was all business. Many Juniors held their breath from September to June because they had no time to breathe. We found ourselves tortured by term papers, suffocated by SAT's, and drowned by deadlines. We just could not cope with Mr. DiMicco, Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Pike, and Mrs. DelBonis all at the same time. Just as we conquered our first big wave of responsibilities, another wave came rapidly flowing in. The idea of class rings, more SAT's, and the Prom was overwhelming. Finally, on April 30, 1988, we took a well-deserved break at the Rocky Point Palladium for our Junior Prom entitled "The Best of Times." After Jessica Eastman was crowned Prom Queen, she and her escort Howie Hague danced the ceremonial dance. Following the Prom was the first Post-Prom Party held at the high school. We closed our Junior year on Class Day, saying good-bye to the Seniors and hello to our Senior year. Although we would miss the Seniors deeply, we did not hesitate for a moment to turn our rings and stake our claim on the title "SENIOR." Mar Mathews, our Class President, received the gavel and made the transition official.

Finally. The big step. We never thought we'd survive exams, love, teachers, lack of love, acne, and especially those pesky, meddlesome underclassmen. But after three years of being underclassmen, we entered school in September as the mighty, invincible, infallible SENIORS! We just could not be touched, not by the underclassmen, our teachers, the principals, or even our parents! We breezed through the hallways pushing aside the insignificant members of the student body. What we didn't realize, however, was that the frenzied madness of college applications would soon blow us away. By Halloween, we were haunted by college essays. By Thanksgiving, we gave thanks for more time to complete our applications. And by Christmas, we rejoiced because everything was finally in to the colleges on time (or close to it). We rang in the new year knowing that our time had finally come; graduation became a reality because 1989 was here. Senior activities quickly arrived. Before we knew it, we were getting our heads measured for caps. Our Senior pictures had been distributed to our closest seventy-four friends, our yearbooks had been ordered, and our class day shirts had been designed. Bring on graduation! But first we had to dress in our best and fix our hair with care as we attended the Senior Ball on June 2. Then, we wrapped up the year with the Senior Dinner on June 9 and Class Day on June 12. Finally on the 14th, we marched boldly down the aisles of the Warwick Musical Theatre to receive the prize for which we had worked all of our lives. They gave us not only our diplomas, but also a feeling of pride and self-esteem.

We entered Coventry High School as insecure, impressionable fourteen-year-olds, yet we left as confident, independent adults. Although we were sad, thinking that this was the end, we finally felt joy, for it was not the end, but just the beginning. Best of luck to the one-of-a-kind Class of 1989! WE DID IT!!

Kelly Egan bequeath a never-ending supply of chocolate candy to Tracey Theroux in hopes that someday I can witness her withdrawal attack.

Shawn Fagan bequeath all my love and good penmanship to Tracey Theroux so that someday she may write in chicken scratch.

Sharon Ferreira bequeath driving lessons to Chris and Marlene because I am tired of their "Dukes of Hazard" driving!

Lisa Fisher bequeath a year's supply of gum to Jennifer Greene so she can give me some; the courage to shop at Rx Place for a pair of shoes to Amy Marsden; and a hearing aid to Chris Blanchette so she will understand me when I talk.

Chris Fontaine bequeath all my hard work in this wonderful institution to Kyle Rekas and Jeff Fontaine.

Joseph Ford bequeath all my good times at CHS to K.L., G.L., G.K., and to all the cool kids.

Leah Forget bequeath to Sharon a cure for all our little problems, especially the worst "Linalit"; and to Lori, a new body part.

Robert Fusco bequeath a new alarm clock to Ed Brown so someday he will get up on time; and a new 12 volt battery to Jay Bettez because with all those lights, he will need all the help he can get.

Kerrin Gallagher bequeath a cool rocket (get in the rocket, baby!) to kickin' Kim Nieforth so that we can forget the keys, cruise to Cranston, and say "Is it green?"; a new laugh to Kristen LaRoche; a Pepsi can to Rick Ramer; and an alarm clock to my brother.

Lori Garganta bequeath all my good times to the Class of '89 (Caf. Crew); rides home from L.A. and a blanket for each of them to Shellie B. and Robin N.; a case of Sprite and a locker organizer for her saying "I just put it in Lori's locker" to Mary; and all my love to the K-Crew!

Todd George bequeath my love to Lynn S., whom I will treasure forever; and my Ford to Dave C. so he can have a Ford to drive instead of a Chevy.

Jennie Giammasi bequeath a list of my favorite "boutiques" to all the people who have ever asked me "Where do you shop???" and an unprinciple-like supply of rigatonia to a fryguy.

Robert Giampietro bequeath to Kyle Rekas some Tylenol and Pepto for the morning after a night at Bev and Joe's!

Frank Gliottone bequeath all my love to Stacey Laramee. I'll always love you, sweetheart; the best is yet to come.

Kimberly Gough bequeath a lifetime supply of Depend to Lori Krekorian in case she has one of her normal attacks.

Mark Gould bequeath a neutered dog to Deb S., Amy H., Caren O., and Jen H. "The best!"; a real date with Scott "The Man" Fraza to Caren Olney; a true love for Corey Rekas; and my sensual body to Missy, Cris, and Tammy, and God knows Caren-3.

Melissa Gourd bequeath all my love letters from Scott to Michelle Gould so one day she will have as many as I do; and a new alarm clock to Rene Guerin so she can get up on time.

Alison Graham bequeath a jar of pickles (with legs), all the flamingos, and all the pink Porsches to anyone who can handle them; my kitties (love you, Nat) to my bestest buddy; to my darling Christopher, I love you dearly. I can't wait until May 18, 1997

Jennifer Greene bequeath my small foot size to Bonnie Prior so that she can have as many shoes as I do; a "Roger" detector to Angela Senerchia so when we go out, she won't have to look for "him"; and my ear to Lisa Fisher so she will always be able to tell me she "doesn't feel good!"

Lisa Greene bequeath a night on the town with the Chippendales to Kristal Marsella.

Gene Gustafson bequeath all my Fords to anyone who can handle them.

Kristen Hagerty bequeath Michelle to Steve; one very long evening with Chris Riggs to Lynn DiTusa; a new car to Kecia; a one-way ticket to Chicago to Pag so he can rap forever; Lynn's shoulders to Rick so his fantasies may be fulfilled; a suit of armor to Mary for those vulnerable weekends; and my love to Steve.

Howard Hague bequeath my baby bottle to any wrestler who can only drink 4 oz. a night and wants it to last.

Amy Hargreaves bequeath four dozen eggs to the Awesome Foursome; my sensuous lips to P.J. Hartley; and the past four years with a very long list of laughs to my bestest friend ever, Debbie Szczsponik.

Kevin Harris bequeath the bill to everything Rob G. broke this year (fence, my door, windows, V.W., etc.) to Kyle and John, if they could ever possibly afford it.

Allison Hart bequeath a new pair of boots to Tex. Your friend forever, Smurf. Love always to Owen (Kirk).

Paul Hartley bequeath a case to Roger Corrente so he doesn't drink my entire stock.

Thomas Hartley bequeath my ridiculous nicknames to anyone who wants them; my blazing speed and my over 50,000 career touchdowns in "sand lot" football to Doug Olson; a large supply of hand grenades and LAW rockets to Marc Chevalier so he can fulfill his constant goal; my love to any girl who likes me despite the fact that I am very shy; much success to the Class of '89 and all future graduating classes; all of my love to my dream girl whoever she may be; and a new Bible to Lisa Card.

Stephanie Hazen bequeath jello, olive juice, and my ever-lasting friendship to Kristen Antos (MSILS); and the best of luck to my brother Eric and to Kris in their remaining years at CHS.

Michelle Hebert bequeath all the great times during my CHS years to T.M., L.K., S.M., L.F., H.B., C.V., M.G., etc.

Julia Hiers bequeath my sarcastic attitude to Amy Blamires in hopes that she may one day wipe that stupid smile off her face.

Michael Holt bequeath a new car to Mat so that he can drive me home in style; a test that doesn't count to Steph Hazen so that we won't have to compete anymore; a huge piece of candy to Mrs. Spaziano for all the ones Mat and I stole from her desk; two cans of soda and a doughnut to Mr. Short; my social position as a senior to all my junior friends so that they will finally have some status in the school; a piece of duct tape to cover his mouth to Ernie so that he will keep his opinions to himself; all my B.O.C. albums to Rick Skog and Bob Bishop in hopes that they will someday appreciate good music; and all my warmth and affection to Lynn DiTusa for always being a friend.

Traditionally, the junior year of high school in America is set aside as the year wherein students make the long-awaited purchases of class rings. The process of choosing one is often tedious. After all, one must decide between millions available: there are silver, white, and yellow gold, or fabricated metal-look rings; semi-precious, genuine, or plastic stones of every color imaginable. Moreover, there are engravings that range from names to years to horses to buses and combinations of the such. After finding the ring most agreeable to his or her finances and taste, a student must find within himself the courage to address the jewelers who appear to have just returned from a funeral. Some are frightened off by this prospect, but most are determined to wear a ring on their finger - the symbol of pending supremacy and personal accomplishment.

Music and Film in Review

At press deadline time these were the latest and hottest items in music and film! We have U2 coming on strong with "Desire," Guns N' Roses with "Sweet Child O' Mine," and Poison with "Every Rose Has Its Thorn." As for the rap scene, we learned that "Parents Just Don't Understand" from D.J. Jazzy Jeff and the Fresh Prince, then we got "Tougher Than Leather" with Run DMC. For months, Rob Base with "It Takes Two," Bobby Brown with "My Prerogative," and Stevie B.

with "Party Your Body" rocked L.A. Beach Club. Def Leppard, INXS, Michael Jackson, Richard Marx, Debbie Gibson, Tiffany, Tracy Chapman, Jody Watley, and Pink Floyd all had albums which reached the top of the charts.

At the movie theater we wondered "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," and why Tom Cruise made the best "Cocktail." The show's soundtrack showed up on the radio when the Beach Boys released their song "Kokomo". We all sweated it out with Bruce Willis in "Die Hard." This proved that David Addison had a gun just as quick as his wit.

Some people say that teenagers experience no stress. Because we are young, they say, we have nothing to worry about and our high school years are the best times of our lives. If you can say this after four years of schooling, perhaps, you need some help! As freshmen, we are subjected to the taunts and ridicule of upperclassmen! There are, also, the problems of adjusting to a larger school, larger homework assignments, larger people, and trying to fit everything into a smaller locker! Surprisingly, most freshmen survive to become sophomores. The sophomore year acts as both a recovery period and a preparation period. While recovering from the horrors of your freshmen experiences, you are psychologically preparing for your grueling junior year! There is absolutely no stress involved in the 10th grade.

We arrive in September as lofty juniors only to have our self-image CRUSHED by June. The pressures at home include mom's nagging about SATs, starting to look at prospective colleges, getting outstanding grades (they look good on your application), and being elected to positions of leadership in many clubs and activities (they too look good on an application). Although mom insists that you be on the Honor Roll, she must realize that the Pike-DiMicco-MacDonald-Pike Team does everything in their power to dash a mother's hopes. The hours upon hours of homework are enough to wish for the end of one's life. There is, however, a small glimmer of hope shining once June comes around: THE SENIOR YEAR. Oh, how all the seniors wish it were true! The worry of getting into a good college, only after you have finished the eighteen essays required for each school, is extremely high on the stress list. Your parents nagging you about college deadlines; your teachers assigning homework during the deadline months; the colleges wanting you to actually study for the SATs are all reasons for senior stress. One of these alone would be enough to end anyone's high school career, but when they are added together, it is a wonder that C.H.S. does not have a graduating class of about three each year.

Although we complain about all of the troubles we are having and all the stress we are going through, we Coventry students are a hardy bunch who tend to persevere. There are those few that enroll themselves in the school's five year plan, and there are those who feel that the pressures are too much and decide to join a religious cult in northern Idaho; but in most cases, the students at Coventry High School take the pressures with a grain of salt and graduate on time.

In a quick stroll through the hallways of C.H.S. one will behold the extravagant parade of cloths showing the exquisite taste of such wordly students. The ever popular "holy" jeans have stratergically placed rips and tears displaying only as many loose threads as custom allows. There are also those occasional black fineries seen slipping through the crowds. Persons wearing such sable apparel put to shame all nuns and priests in their devotion to that sacred color. The untied high-top sneaker is another favorite; however, it is a well known fact that persons can get the similar sloppy, oversized look for a cheaper price by buying old clown shoes. Awaiting some miraculous flood are those who roll up their pants seemingly higher each day. The hallway scene would not be complete without the infamous duo of mini-skirt and high heels. Many a girl has winced at the thought of splitting the seams when trying to take her seat. It is definite that such fashionable clothing will make appearances in next year's yearbook, and all are holding their breaths in anticipation of new Gypsy ensemble.

When starting out in high school, there are a few very important terms to know. They can be the difference between passing and failing if used correctly.

Bookweight - The books you bring home each night just so your parents think you do homework.

Nexperwork - The work you do one period that is due the next. See also: Homeroomwork, Lunchwork Eduneurons - The part of the brain that remembers assignments. It stays in school and is the reason that you never remember homework over the week-end.

Dicbarrier - The pen speed record for high velocity writing during an essay rest.

Frizzies - The little frings on notebook paper. For some reason, teachers are seriously allergic to these.

#G/%!!+@ - Used every fourth word in gym class in order to sound as macho as everyone else.

With the aid of these key phrases, you will be able to express yourself more effectively, if not more politely.

For years the oak tree has been a central theme of Coventry High School. Some ask themselves while pondering the mysteries of life why we must undergo the awkwardness of telling others that we are "The Oakers". Upon closer examination, Having a tree for our symbol is not really all that bad. Trees are often personified as wise, principally for their silence, and honorable, for their quality of growing upright. The oak, in fact, is classified as a strong wood. Trees cannot seek shelter when storms sweep through their land; They must face the trouble and live or die. The leaves of the oak resemble hands - reaching out. These are hands with both the capacity for gentleness and the ability to pelt acorns.
