Below Kerri Fitzpatrick looks engrossed in her making of a balloon rainbow for the Student Council float which appeared in the Homecoming Parade. Next to Kerri is Leigh-Ann Vicars, Tiffany St. Germain, Jessica Dalton, Karla Coy, Erin Grady, and Sue Forte are all posing excitedly for their picture while at Coventry Credit Union preparing themselves to take part in Coventry High's Homecoming Parade.

President- Julie Seltsam. Julie provides and plans for activities and events that will help in making our junior year exciting.

Officers- Sue Forte- Vice-President, Mary Herron- Secretary, Karen Pratt- Treasurer. The class officers help Julie in making a memorable junior year for all.

Advisor- Miss Cambell. Miss Cambell keeps herself busy between teaching business courses and advising the junior class.

Social Committee- Steve Toole, Karla Coy, Stephanie Seidel, Aimee Viens, Jim Kaplan. The social committee contributes to helping everyone else in making an enjoyable junior year.

About Juniors

Do you remember the confusion you went through the past two Septembers? Upperclassmen tried to be of aid, but more confusion is all they made. Seniors are what you long to be, but it seems like an eternity. Classes, activities, and weekends seem to pass the time by. You can live through it if you try.

AAAACCCCKKKK!!!

Your Junior year is often the most busy and crucial year of your high school career. Amidst stressful courses and SAT's, you must think about college. Between academic studies and after-school activities, there is no time for anything else. However, most juniors start driving and having after-school jobs. The biggest events of the year include your Junior Prom, the Christmas Dance, and getting a class ring. Whew! What a year!

Crazy Traditions

One of the strangest rivalries in the entire state is the West Warwick versus Coventry Thanksgiving Day football game. In preparation for this momentous occasion, the CHS football team has created a tradition of its own. Each year, most of the players congregate at a local barbershop on a designated day to shave their heads. Actually, this entails getting a Mohawk with your number shaved into the side. This year, with the Super Bowl lying ahead, some kids got really creative with footballs, goalposts and C's inscribed in their pates. It just goes to show how hair can become a singular form of art as well as a great way to show school spirit.

Driving Difficulties!

Whew! You have just passed your driving test. Congratulations! What are you going to do now? No, not go to Disney World. Of course, you're going to take all your friends out cruising around. But where? This doesn't usually present a problem since there are plenty of places to go and things to do. However, whether you ever actually get there is another story. Between getting lost, getting into some sort of minor mishap, and having car trouble, it is a wonder you ever get anywhere at all. But then, that's all part of the fun of driving, well, as long as nothing serious happens to you. You're independent. You're driving!!

Snooze Alert!

With all the things students have going on in their lives, it is a wonder they ever manage to stay awake at all. Between school, extracurricular activities, and sports, there isn't much time for sleeping. And, that isn't even mentioning going out with friends. All this contributes to a serious sleep deficit by the time Friday afternoon rolls around. So how do students catch up on their sleep? By slumbering where-ever and whenever they can. One of the tricks to catching a little nap is to sit behind someone who can act as a barrier between you and the teacher. Hiding behind a pocketbook works well, too. The most important trick is not to make any noise that will draw attention to yourself. If you are lucky, you might be able to catch a few winks before the everwatchful faculty spot you and return you to the world of the almost awake!

Aha 94!

The sophomore year is considered a "cooling off" period between freshman uncertainty and junior pressures. Indeed, academically your sophomore year is less strenuous than any of your other high school years. This spare time allows for more social activities. Actually, many students learn to drive during their sophomore year. This new privilege opens whole new opportunities. Overall, with lessened academic pressure and more social advantages, the sophomore year can be a lot of fun.

TRAUMA

The average sophomore arrives in September expecting another simple, freshman-like year. Little do they know the dangers that lurk just inside their classroom doors. Each teacher is waiting to make their lives a living purgatory. Five hours of homework, the dreaded term paper, and countless nervous breakdowns are awaiting the naive sophomores. Look out! The teachers will try to lure you into a false sense of security. Beware if you are the sophomore taking honors classes. Don't expect to get more than five hours sleep a night or any free weekends. Your social life formally ends when you become a sophomore honors student. Unless of course you consider spending Friday nights at the library are exciting experience. in which case you don't deserve to have a social life anyway! Advice to the future sophomore honors student: DON'T BE ONE!! SAVE YOURSELVES WHILE YOU CAN!! BYE-BYE!!

Transitions

Aah, sophomore year. Just when you settled into the rhythm of being the low man on the totem pole, you now move onto the sophomore year and Honors classes. With your new-found prestige comes increased responsibility. For instance, you now have to set an example for the freshmen in fashion, speech and behavior. As you guide these naive youngsters through their initiation into high school life you dream of moving on to bigger and better things, like class rings, your first prom and all the perks that go with the junior year.

School on Saturday?

As you drive into the parking lot the familiar cars are absent. The void of people tells you today is not a normal school day. No, it's Saturday and you are here to sit in a stuffy room for three or more hours to take the worst test of your life. In the name of getting into college you have given up the most beautiful Saturday in April to sit in CHS and color in little bubbles signifying answers that you really didn't know. The worst part is you'll have to take these tests over and over again until you get it right. Also the PSAT is a lot easier than the SAT so you REALLY don't have a clue when you take those! Take heart, however, because colleges don't really look at your tests first, they look at grades. Oh, no!

Quizical Quotes

During a dreary last period, Mr. Piascik presented our history class with the philosophical question, "What is the sophomore year?" After deep thought and lots of laughing, here is what it came down to:

"End of the beginning, beginning of the end."

"Last year of puppy love!"

"It's like a mid-life crisis or menopause."

"It's dull, bland, but still good for you, kinda like brussel sprouts."

"A state of mush."

"I wanna get outta here!"

That says it all I guess!

Utopia?

Close your eyes. Breathe deeply and evenly. Hum softly. Picture that favorite place. You're in a green glen with song birds singing melodius tunes just for you. Or maybe on a pristine white beach with the waves caressing the sands. Or perhaps a yellow summer meadow with the sweetness of flowers and warm breezes. Picture it, hear the sounds. Everything is in harmony. Everyone is happy. You want nothing. You need nothing. You are fulfilled. There is no conflict, no disturbance. Isn't it wonderful . . . uh, wonderfully . . . wonderfully boring?

Aha 95!

The freshmen have begun their path towards adulthood. Every freshman looks forward to their Freshman Semi-formal held at the end of the year. Many are intimidated by upperclassmen at the beginning of the year but soon overcome their fear. They are subjected to the taunts and ridicule of upperclassmen and also the problems of adjusting to a larger school, larger homework assignments, smaller lockers, and a larger crowd of people from all sorts of groups. But freshmen somehow survive to become sophomores.

President- Jackie Russell. As the first President of the class of 1995 Jackie sets an example for future leaders and leads her classmates to a successful year.

Officers- Kristi-Lee Rondeau, Vice-President; Jessica Beagan, Secretary; Kristen Webb, Treasurer; Sue Innonog, Student Council Representative (not pictured).

The frosh learn how to use governmental and leadership abilities to assist the President in completing the activities of the school year.

Class Advisor- Miss Corso. In her role as Freshman Class Advisor, Miss Corso guides the students through their first year as leaders assuring success and a fun time for all.

Social Committee- back: Merebeth Menard, Beth Vanasse, Andy Wade, Heather Preto. front: Kara Messier, Nathan Moore, Wendi Paul, Missy Sweet.

An integral part of the leadership experience is the social committee, whose function it is to aid the officers in executing the many events of the freshman year.

Dealing With Stress

1. Remember that although your feelings and symptoms are frightening, they are neither dangerous nor harmful.
2. Understand that what you are experiencing is merely an exaggeration of your normal reactions to stress.
3. Do not fight your feelings or try to wish them away.
4. If you find your self asking, "What if?" tell yourself, so what.
5. Stay in the present rather than the future.
6. Label your fear level from 0 - 10 and watch it go up and down. Notice it only stays high for a few seconds.
7. Don't ever think "What If?" Just perform some simple task.
8. Notice when you stop thinking bad thoughts, your anxiety fades.
9. When fears comes, except it, don't fight it, wait and give it time to pass.
10. Think about how good you will feel when anxiety has passed and you are in total control.

Procrastination

Does work pile up on you as if it were an avalanche? Do the days never seem long enough? Do you attempt to write several papers in a 12 hour period? If you've answered yes to these questions you are a typical procrastinating student, and no other year is as worse for work overload than your Freshman year. It is your first year in the high school and your first step to that even bigger college. They say that the Freshman year is your "try out" year. Teachers dish out the work. For example, how many times have you heard: "this will help you in the future" or "we're doing this for your own good?" And of course, a procrastinator's reaction would be to put it off because "the teacher's can't be serious." Then the day before your paper is due, it is 9 PM and you find yourself slaving over the first paragraph of your 5 page paper. In conclusion, the most common solution to this growing problem is to start reforming your work schedule. But you don't, you just put it off, don't you.

Eve of Destruction

The first day of school for freshmen can be full of anticipation. The night before you ponder on philosophical thoughts like will I be tall enough to reach the lockers? Will I need a road map of the building? Will I even find my room and friends? Finally, you fall asleep after breaking out in a cold sweat! Then the morning of destruction comes. You wait for that yellow thing (school bus) to come. Panic builds on your way to school as you keep your mind off the impending doom by singing Spirituals such as "Oh, Lord I'm Troubling." Finally you arrive at that ominous brick-like structure called Coventry High School. You enter and become part of a tidal wave of people. You feel like you are sinking down to the bottom. You hear a voice and see a face that you recognize. It is your best friend. Together you walk around the halls, check out the lockers and locate your rooms. Your fears quickly fade as you realize "I like the place and I can survive!"

Mixed Emotions

I believe a wise man once said: The freshman year was a time for joy; a time for sorrow. A time of maturity; and of naivety. A time when a fair faced girl can find the man of her dreams. No wait, that was Charles Dickens. Let's face it, frosh year is nothing like the joyful little painting that certain people try to paint. Really the first week is a complete dream from the caverns of Hell. With all the odd numbering systems of the hallways, and usually packed halls, this school can be a little less than fun. But let's not be the rain that ruined the party. There are good times. Let me see . . . Um . . . Well . . . Oh yeah! The freshman dance is fun and you do make some friends. So don't be upset, but definately don't feel too good about this year. Remember you've got three more years.

Simple Life

Oh, how I long for the days of freshman life! The thought of colleges and their confusing applications was distant in those days of old. Indeed, freshmen live a carefree life that makes even the least serious senior green with envy. Teachers naturally assume that ninth graders need a light course load in order to adjust to the new rigors of high school. Consequently, freshmen are more than willing to take advantage of these freedoms. Dances and parties become major parts of traditional culture. Of course, with the sophomore year right around the corner, the academic program accelerates. This fact makes seniors smile warmly.

Ah, life as a Freshman. It's never as bad as you think it will be, but rest assured that high school only gets better from here! Until you become a junior, of course. Then you'll want to be a freshman again.

Realizing that you've forgotten your math book, you decide to go back to school to retrieve your Book of Knowledge and Notebook of Power. As you enter school, you hear only the loud beep of the security system. Suddenly a blur of color, a snippet of chatter, and then silence. What you have experienced is the teachers' Speed Walking Club. Beware! These ladies are known to hit and run and they are wanted in 20 classrooms throughout the school.

Dear "92" Oaker Graduates:

It is a pleasure to offer each of you my congratulations and those of the entire faculty and staff on this important occasion of your graduation.

We hope you have enjoyed your career here and that you have taken advantage of the many academic and extra-curricular experiences offered you. There are few secondary schools capable of the educational opportunities to their students like that of Coventry High School. It is gratifying to know that the overwhelming majority of you have taken part in co-curricular activities including our Student Council, several athletic programs, WCVY Radio, yearbook, VICA, Math Club, cheerleading and the list goes on. While the skills derived from these activities are considerable, what you have learned in your academic classrooms is the most important. Not one of you will be able to complete your education with this high school graduation experience. The modern world will demand much more from all of us, thus the need to continue a lifelong commitment to your education.

While our mission is in the area of academics, we hope that you will take with you pleasant memories. As you close your high school years, I wish you the very best. May you have much good news to exchange at your future class reunions — for they will come soon enough. Again, congratulations and many thanks for your friendship.

Class

Each year a group of unsuspecting frosh walk into their biology class to the smiling (or not so smiling) face of Mr. Morin. They begin to realize as the ever fateful saying of, "Hello out there in Student Land. This is Earth calling!" rings from his lips that they are in for one heck of a year. While sitting on his desk swinging his legs back and forth he'll tell you of his good friend Paula (Paula Pre-cell that is) and just how she evolved. Just when you think your brain is going to explode with information another teacher will come in and temporarily relieve your brains from overloading. But after a short rest he starts again, just don't ask any odd question or he might have to "kick you through the goal posts of life." He will end up saying this about 94 times over the course of a school year (we kept count). But it could be worse, he could "drop kick you down the back stairs." Just remember one important answer on those essay questions that Monkey's climb trees and Grant is buried in Grant's tomb (or maybe Elvis is). And of course to Mr. Morin, "God is a WOMAN!"

Wonder

Do you ever wonder about what teachers do in their spare time? Upon musing on this subject my imagination began to wander through the misty halls of the mind. Do our esteemed educators crave freedom from this building, striding out into the fresh air of the natural environment or do they long for a quiet moment alone with their luminescent computer screens? Can a teacher be found enjoying weekends in the country side or feeling the pulse of a throbbing metropolis? Are the teachers at home correcting papers in seclusion like monks or are they out at happening night clubs and eating establishments living lives of glamour? These questions prey upon my mind like many other important philosophical queries. Unfortunately this pondering seems to get me nowhere and I'll have to resign myself to add this question to the ranks of others like "How many licks does it take to get to the center of a Tootsie Pop?"

You hear the rumor in the morning and when you walk into class it's true. God has answered your prayers. Your teacher isn't in and the test you had forgotten (or paper you forgot to write) is postponed. You're saved! You have a sub.

The sub begins to speak as the class settles down. "All right, as you have noticed your teacher isn't here and you don't have the test." Cheers from the class, "But, an assignment was left. So get to work and be quiet!"

So does everyone break out their books and get down to work?? It depends. If the sub means business they might or they might ask to work in groups. But almost always by the end of the class everyone is talking. But in spite of everything everyone realizes the teacher needs a day off too.

One of the most integral parts of life at CHS is the athletic programs. Every one of the student athletes puts a tremendous amount of energy into playing for their respective teams. Many times long hours are spent practicing as well as studying. Just about every student enjoys either participating in or watching the great variety of events occurring at the high school every year. Sometimes only spectating can be just as exciting as playing. This year this fact was proven at the Super Bowl, wrestling meets, and volleyball confrontations with North Kingstown. Nearly everyone turned out to exhibit their school spirit and support their Oakers. All in all, sports at Coventry High mean a great deal to everyone, for dull is the weekend when there are no games to attend.

The Oakers' complete turnaround this season was nothing short of miraculous. Coming off of a completely winless season last year, Coventry put up their first early victory that showed that this season would be different. Senior Captains Mike Primrose, Glen Gustafson, and Damon Phelps led the Oakers to an awesome Homecoming shut-out of East Greenwich 20-0. Throughout a steady season of consistent victories, CHS held their own in their division. With the help of talented underclassmen Jim Kaplan, Mike Tucciarone, and quarterback Mike Voelker, the Oakers finished the season tied for second place and stastically achieved a place in the Super Bowl. On Thanksgiving Day, Coventry exhilarated all of their fans by stymying traditional rival West Warwick. In the Super Bowl, the Oakers put up a valiant effort against Johnston in a season ending loss. Overall, the 1991 season was a tremendous success for players, coaches, and fans alike.

This year CHS's boy's soccer team had an excellent season leading to a Division II State Championship. The Oakers were very successful throughout a challenging, rigorous season despite a few minor difficulties with West Warwick along the way. Senior leaders, Mike Grenier, Eric George, Eric Oaks, Jim Oaks, and Scott Caron, springboarded Coventry into the play-offs where they handily defeated Cranston West. Juniors, Ben Shear and Rick Frigon, helped CHS dispose of Burri-ville in the semi's 4-0 so that they could face rival West Warwick in the finals. The championship game proved to be an exciting, tightly-played match but the Oakers proved victorious by a score of 2-1. All of their hard work paid off in a tremendously deserving championship.

The Oaker boys volleyball team had a very successful 1991 season even though a second state championship eluded them. They finished an exciting year with only one loss. Before a packed home gym, team captains Evan Noel and Ron Pelletier led the Oaker troops to an exhilarating victory over arch-rival North Kingstown in one of the many highlights of the season. Senior standouts, Dave Riley, Kevin Conde, Eric Hazen, Travis Diggs, and Steve Giguere, helped the Oakers gain a berth in the play-offs. After soundly beating Central in the quarterfinals, the CHS spikers triumphantly moved into the semi's. There, they played a five game thriller against East Providence to advance to the championship round to defend their title. Even though their opponent NK ultimately defeated them, the Oakers provided a great game for all of the fans attending.

The Oaker cagers hit the court shooting early on this season as they captured the title of the coveted W.W. X-mass tournament. With the help of one of the state's best off guards, Brian McGovern, they rolled on with a win in the championship of the Coventry tournament over X-mass vacation. Seniors, Dave Riley, Sean Hogan, Evan Noel, Larry Chase, and Eric Hazen all lent a helping hand in these impressive victories. Several quality wins in tight class A competition earned the team a place in the state playoffs. Despite the supreme efforts of all the players, dreams of a state championship when the Oakers were stymied by a formidable Hope squad. But, with star underclassmen, Ryan McDermott, Mike Tucciarone, and John Gallogly all returning next year look for some great games to come.

The Lady Oakers were off to a great start this season with a startling upset of the Classical Team. However, despite the girls efforts the interschoolastic schedule proved to be a bit rocky. Seniors Jackie Rothfuss and Melanie Kipp proved to be a great asset as the Oakers tried to make the playoffs. Underclassmen Cathy Casteson, Sue Lynch, Amy Verdi, and Kim Magnan all pitched in when the team played their last game of the season, a playoff qualifier. Unfortunately, they were knocked out of contention, but thanks to their great style of plays, they did much better than last year.

The CHS hockey team this year performed admirably although they were plagued by injury throughout the year. All the fans in attendance were thrilled by several overtime victories posted early on in the season. While senior goal tender, Ron Patrick, consistently blocked shots all season, John McKenna, Jeff Hone, Dan Lauteri, and Chris Guillette provided both the goals and the defense. Talented underclassmen Andy Fiocchi, Ben Creelman, and Ken Averill also contributed to the Oakers success. Despite the late season slide, Coventry entered the playoffs against North Smithfield with a barrage of goals by John McKenna, defeating them 6 to 3. North came back in the second game of the series forcing a tie-breaker.
