Long on Spirit

Yeah! Yeah! That's right we got spirit! We've got so much spirit it shows right down to our toes. Our school has many devoted fans who sit out in the cold days of November, snuggled up in blankets and wearing red and white from their face down to their feet. These devoted, if not crazy, fans cheer on our many talented Oaker teams to victory over our opponents. The school's very own elephant mascot runs around stirring up the fans and starting the wave. On October 3, the Oakers had their annual Homecoming parade. This year's theme was "Behead Bristol". There were floats of all sizes, shapes and oddities. The parade was led by ROTC followed by the band, and then the floats and homecoming king and queen candidates. This year the Student Council float won first place, and the Cheerleaders won second. During half-time the King and Queen were crowned by last year's queen, Amy Carlson. The lucky couple were Tonia DeGregory and Rick Frigon. Another time our fans can get excited and rowdy is at the Pep-rally for the Thanksgiving game against West Warwick. During this assembly the object is to get your class to scream the loudest. Our school not only has spirit in our sports, we have spirit in our school as well. Also during school, many school spirit projects go on, such as the DECA clean-a-thon, which went along with the school beautification process. DECA also helps show our school spirit with the Christmas project which gets toys for the underprivileged families of Coventry. The most spirited and hysterical time of the year is Spirit Week, during the span of one week the classes clash against each other, to determine which class the most spirit. Coventry High School will not be put to rest until the school's name becomes synonymous with SPIRIT!

Short on

Space

You would think that with the extra room brought to CHS in the new addition, space would not be a serious problem. At the start of the year, however, it was evident that things were a little cramped. The first sign was the constant stop-and-go traffic in front of every stair well. Another indication of the lack of elbow room was the alarming number of students in the lunchroom and the corresponding lack of space to seat them. As a result, the lunchroom was clogged with students who had no better alternative than standing in place and being a traffic hazard. Things were far worse, however, when lunch ended and the changing of the lunches began. The L.A. Freeways are a country drive compared to that kind of gridlock. The last straw, though, was the arrangement of study halls. Madness erupted when study halls crammed a mind-boggling number of students into small, inhospitable rooms. The problem was temporarily solved when several gargantuan study halls were moved to the cafeteria. During lunch, study hall students were placed in the library, placing that Hall of Higher Knowledge into full-fledged anarchy. The rallying cry of "Two to a table!" no longer applied. Fortunately for the librarians, the wise elders of Guidance fixed their mistake and evenly distributed the students to different studies. The move made little difference to most students, however; they still won't get any work done anyway.

At Long Last!

In reality, four years is an extremely small part of a person's life, and in the cosmic scheme of things four years is a mere grain in the sand of time. This fact is lost on teenagers until they near graduation. Each of us suddenly realizes that adolescence is over. With our diplomas comes a new sense of responsibility and maturity, indicating that we are ready to make our mark in the world. The down side of this new maturity is that we will never be the same again. High school is a one-time experience, one that is never fully appreciated until long after we are gone, and one that is so short that if we don't stop and look around once in a while, we might miss all the fun.

Long Wait

Yes! It has finally come, the long awaited senior year. After the stress and strain of the past three years, we finally have a chance to breathe and have a little fun. The classes are not so stressful, as in past years, and the respect of being a senior falls into your lap. Mainly this was a year of friends and memories of all the good times and bad which will be yours for always and forever.

Sarah Duquette and Ryan McDermott are wondering if they can stuff anything else into their tiny lockers. Jim Kaplan, with caffeine soda in hand, is getting psyched for Homecoming.

Sandy Fluette, Chandra Eden & Kristen Giglietti hang out where no man has gone before.

We've Got

"Whaddayamean it's April 11! That means tonight's the . . . Junior Prom! I still have a ton to do!" - So starts the day of the event that is the epic of a junior's life. After a quick shower and dressing, one must endure the worst stage of this night, pictures. Finally the limo speeds off with your parents behind yelling to have a good time and reminding you of your curfew, and you are off to pick up your date. As you arrive, you find most of her extended family there. Much to your dismay you see that they are all armed with cameras. Once again you go through the tedious process of being photographed next to everything. But soon the limo zips you away from all the commotion toward King's Inn in Lincoln. Now that you're here, you check to find your table. Next you hurry to get your pictures taken (the alternative is to wait and run the risk of your date's hair getting all mussed up and for her to spend the rest of the evening in the ladies' room trying to set it right again). After waiting forever, you are standing before another camera with a photographer who's trying to get both of you to smile together. There is a click and it's all over. The next order of business is to get fully settled at your table. You no sooner sit down when you notice people heading for the dance floor. It's time for the receiving line. You walk through shaking hands with friends and peers. It was at this moment that something deep inside you changes. You start to feel the magic in the air on this very special night. Our gourmet meal came next. Then King Jason Dick and Queen Steph Seidel were crowned. They took the first dance and then everyone hit the floor. Then before we knew it the last song was upon us. Everyone drew their dates closer and moved to "We've got tonight" by Bob Seger. It was a perfect end to an enchanting evening

A Short Time

During this year memories of all the good times of CHS will be etched into our minds, and will remain there forever. In 5 years we may not all still be friends, but thinking back on this time we will remember the laughs we once had. Graduation will be a new page in the book of life, but at the same time leaving these friends behind will be the hardest test we have ever taken. "Parting is such sweet sorrow."

Will a kiss make it better?

Joey and Jay eat one of the yummy school lunches (yeah right!), while administrators make sure that no food gets out of hand.

A Short & Remembrance

When we entered the doors of Coventry High School on September 4, 1989 we thought we were on top of the world. Little did we know how long the road would be.

Our Freshman year was marked by our introduction to the timeworn phrase, "Tomorrow is June!". Freshman class president Amy Verdi led us through our initial sojourn at CHS. We received a cold blast of reality early that year when we were forced outside at 7:00 am due to a malfunctioning fire alarm. Another highlight was our dissection of an unknown goo, now known as the infamous liver lab. On the social side, we had a ball at the Club Coca-Cola dance, and capped off our inaugural year in high school with the Freshman Dance.

As we plunged into our sophomore year we began to find ourselves, not only as a class, but as individual people. We expanded our minds with Coppa-isms and the Periodic table, and applied our vast knowledge when we attempted the PSAT's. Taking us through our Renaissance year was sophomore class president, Jackie Cottrell. Some of the more hardy souls ventured into the beyond with Mr. Casey and Mr. Harrigan for Driver's Ed, laboring under the shadow of what would become the new addition.

Our Junior year was coming of age, and came with big changes. One of the biggest was the opening of the new addition, which gave us the coolest lockers in the school. Some of the artistic members of our class promptly decorated their lockers with all sorts of interesting paraphernalia. The new addition also brought us the language lab, which none of the foreign language teachers seemed to know how to use. One of the highlights of '91- '92 came when our football team made an appearance at the Super Bowl. Another memory of our Junior year that we'll never forget (no matter how hard we try) was legendary Junior-Senior X-mas dance. In other entertainment news we swooned over Jesse King's rendition of Piano Man in the Varsity Review. Our social calendar peaked at the Junior Prom, which was held on April 11, 1992. Stephanie Siedel was the Prom Queen, and Jason Dick was the Prom King. Presiding over the festivities was Junior Class President Jullie Seltsam.

Class Day was an emotional time for all of us. We said goodbye to outgoing seniors, while Sue Forte ushered in our careers at seniors with the turning of the rings ceremony.

With our senior year, the class of '93 realized that the long road to college had become the shortest of adventures. We were caught between the times we had at CHS and the times we would have beyond high school. The Gods of Education did their best to slow us down, throwing SAT's, college applications, and epic Dr. Girard exams at us. Nevertheless, we marched onward.

After years of hardship, the Oaker football team, lead by its dominating seniors, captured their first state championship rounding out an undefeated season. Our second go at the Junior-Senior X-mas dance was a success, as Senior Class President Lauren Ferrucci called the shots. The time passed quickly, and before we knew it, we had reached the Senior Ball, held at Johnson and Wales on March 14, 1993. The end of the road came quickly, as we whirled through the Senior festivities, including the Senior Supper June 1, Class Day on June 10, and finally Graduation on June 12. With our diplomas came a fond remembrance of times past, and new hope for the future, as the Class of '93 embarked on an adventure into the boundless future.

158 Hopkins Hill Rd. Nothing is accomplished in this world without passion. Marriage and Career.

The long road to the diploma has finally come to an end. After spending four years in this school it is very hard to pull yourself away. The friends that have been there through all the good times and bad now come to the realization of how much they are going to miss each other. One of the supposedly happiest days of a senior's life is class day, and yet the tears seem to flow without end. Just the thought of leaving all that you have known for four long years is odd if not scary. The seniors all file into the auditorium, in their caps in gown, and in their hearts they carry with them the hopes, dreams, fears, and promise of the class of '93. Best of luck to all! H. Dwarf

Wayne demonstrating the correct position for making out a pass.

The senior class displaying the way to ride on a truck just in the manner that their mothers told them not to.

A short four years is all the time that a person has to find themselves, realize where their future lies, and how they are going to get there. These short four years is what is known to all teenagers as high school. High school is the place where teenagers either chose to go with the norm or strike out on their own. Even when the going gets tough, the tough get tougher, and hold themselves till the end of the year. At the end of the four years of high school, the students realize how short the years were and that that phase of their life is now over. As one phase of their life fades away, they turn to face a new phase, college or some other step up to a more mature level. H. Dwarf

A Short Time Away

The junior year can seem like the longest or shortest during high school. The work gets tougher as the teachers start to prepare you for college. All the while telling you that this is probably the most important year of your high school career. Then there are also the dreaded PSATs and SATs. It also is a lot of fun with the receiving of class rings, and the change to seniors at class day. The most important day of the Junior's life is probably the Junior prom. All this and more makes up one of the toughest and most memorable experiences of high school.

Juniors

President: Matthew Weinand
 Matt hopes to make the class of 94's junior year the best possible. Matt's quote on life is "Regrets are the main cause of grey hair."

Advisors: Kathleen Campbell
 With her aid and support, this years junior year will be the best ever. Campbell will give her time and best effort to help achieve this goal.

Class Officers: Student Council Rep. Tracey McManus, Treasurer Cathy Castenson, Vice President Melissa Hall.
Social Committee: (back) Susan Lynch, Jaime Nash, (front) Cathy Mageau, Giselle Laliberte.

The officers and social committee work together to help form a junior year to remember. They all work together to come up with the theme to our Junior Prom. They were also vocal in the plans for the Junior Senior Christmas dance. They help make up the list of activities for Class Day, and about every aspect of Junior year.

Relationships

The longest relationship, to juniors, it means being attached for one month to two years! Most juniors, the longest relationship was from six months to one year. A social leper said to have no relationship at all, while another individual thought it wise to calculate the relationship to precision. We're talking years, months, days, and minutes. (obviously they're not over it). In the believe it or not category, someone is already married! Now that's a relationship! On the other extreme, when asked about their shortest relationship, the most common response was from one day to one week. Although some who truly dread commitment admitted to brief encounters ranging from one minute to one hour.

Music!

Through the investigation of the junior class, we found the musical tastes while dredging through the deep corridors of the mind. The number one song was "November Rain", while "Stairway to Heaven" ran a close second. Other interesting selections were "Alice's Restaurant" and "The Wall". The number one short song was "Happy Birthday" (sadly enough), while "Mary Had a Little Lamb" was in the second slot. We never claimed juniors were pinnacles of sanity.

Shaved Heads

Walking down the halls, determining what day it is. Then, you see something that makes you to hope you're dreaming. But sadly your not. You see a guy, clad in red and white, with his head shaven. He let this happen, while he was awake. You look in horror at hair shaped like goalposts and footballs. You experience a feeling of deja-vu. Yes you have seen this before. It is an annual ritual to celebrate the Football team's making the Superbowl. You feel pride in their triumphs, but when you see their mohawked heads you shake your head and laugh. You console one of the their girlfriends, as she cries for his hair loss. With this: "Well . . . it will all grow back by Christmas."

The Long Mile

The end of fitness week, and the only thing left is the mile run. The locker room is quiet anticipating the inevitable. They file out to the track like Indians on the trail of tears. The gym teacher has an evil smile on taunting us for our misfortune. The weather feels like the Mohabbi Desert, until the home stretch, where gusts of wind pelt the runners making them feel like they're not moving. At the start of the race they pick their pace, usually a jog for the first 50 feet, and all start their race to pain! The heat picks the runners off one by one, and when they feel they can't jog one more step, the gym teacher says, "Your doing great only ½ mile left to go!"

Choice

Which do you prefer leather or lace? According to this years junior class lace beat out leather with 60 percent of the vote. But of course here at Coventry there will always be that one individual person who will get a multiple choice question wrong. This one person answered with barbed wire. Maybe for fences, but not for clothing.

The Junior class has a long year ahead of them. The year consists of a lot of studying, SAT's, term papers, to ensure their being accepted into the college of their choice. An advantage of the junior year is the Jr. Prom, the first formal event of their high school years.

BEEP! BEEP! ZONK! Stress, what's stress? Juniors don't have stress at all. Our parents never pressure us to get a job, get good grades, or to be home by curfew, or to get or break up with a boyfriend. Never! And they never take pleasure in telling you "I told you so!", they sound even less mature then they make us out to be. Oh and whoever said school was stressful. 10 pages of History; 5 Trigonometry problems; and a 10 page paper on the life of amoebas is nothing for a junior. No sweat! Plus the opposite sex never stresses me. Stress, I am not stressed, not at all, never, never, never, NEVER!!! Ahhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh! Sexy Toe

A Short Step Up

Being a sophomore involves finding the time to cram 1000 difference tasks into a few short minutes. The classes are all a fast blur, and there are so many activites to be involved in that sometimes we get caught short on time. No matter what, we're always on the go. That's why we're so strange! We're sophomores!

Sophomores

Social Committee: Michelle Clark, Kristen Webb, Beth Vannasse, Jessica Beagan, Emily Warrender.

Together hand in hand, the class officers and social committee make the vital decisions for the class of '95. Along with the president and advisor, these two committees form what will be known as this year's sophomore class. They work on the Sophomore dance, and bring their class together for the ever popular Spirit Week.

Advisor: Mr. Brisette

Mr. Brisette gives up a lot of his time, to advise the sophomore class. He helps to make it one of the best classes at CHS.

President: Amy Mroz

Even though its her first presidency, Amy has been doing a great job at making this year a memorable one.

Tall People

Short girls are always complaining about guys looking down their shirts. I don't have that problem! I am one of the tall girls in CHS. I have a different problem, all the guys are too short! It's hard to find a tall guy to go with to a prom or a dance. Everyone knows that short guys don't mind dancing with tall girls. But that feels a little weird having a guys head at such an uncomfortable level. Yes, tall girls may be able to play basketball or volleyball better. But finding a guy is always a challenge.

Leather or Lace?

Sophomores seem to take this question pretty seriously which do you prefer a few tenth graders that we asked told all. The results: 18 students thought leather is tops, while seventeen favored lace. Neither was chosen by three of the students. Poor sports! Also one indecisive vote for both was cast. Someone was even nice enough to say "What's it to you!?" Talk about touchy! Must be a cotton advocate. Personally, I think that silk should have been a choice . . .

Plash?

Is it the way little kids say splash? Is it just a lightning bolt hitting the water. Maybe it is an hsalp backwards! These are some of the responses we got when 50 sophomores about the word plash. One answer was a fight between a girl and her boy. Another was the sound of a bullet hitting the water, or a person hitting water. However, I don't know what one person had in mind when they replied plaid clashing. One answer was a good looking person. Even with the ideas that poured in, my favorite was still a typo!

Titans

A mighty battle is raging through the halls of Coventry High. Tempers flare as disagreement after disagreement occur. Out of this darkness looms one question: Who is stronger Popeye or Mighty Mouse? We decided to get to the bottom of it. The reply we got from the Sophomore class was unbelievable. With the exception of a few unprintable replies, it was a good response. 34 of the 50 sophomores asked said it was definitely Mighty Mouse, because Popeye needed spinach to obtain his strength. Sorry, sailor, you only got 15 votes. Better luck next time. There was also a last minute write-in, namely Wolverine, getting one vote. Wolverine? Please! Everyone knows Wonderwoman is the strongest superhero!

Pitt stop?

Recently, we surveyed a group of sophomores and asked them to cite their longest and shortest relationships. Well, most of the people's longest relationships were between six months and a year. While the shorter ones were about one week. You always have a smart aleck or two in there, who say, "Well I've known my mom for 15 years." It seems that sophomore relationships are kind of iffy. Some may last for awhile but some are just temporary. For those of you who had relationships that lasted less than a day, do you think you could call that a relationship? Think about them and see if you can decide whether to call it a relationship or a pitt stop!

Sophomore year is almost worse than freshman year for many reasons. Sophomores do not even get their own dance. Freshman at least have that, even though they cannot dress up and they have to dance in the cafeteria. However, this year was better than previous years for sophomores, with the addition of Midnight Madness, the lock-in dance for them and their guests. Everyone who attended left tired but happy, thrilled that they were first to experience a new tradition at Coventry High.

Have you ever wondered what exactly goes into school food? You are not alone! Scientists at leading research facilities are still pondering over that thought provoking question. For example, where does the "hamburger" actually come from? What kind of animal could it be? Or is it really some new strain of tropical plant grown just to try to fool your tastebuds? What about the chicken patties. Sometimes they are as tough as a demanding English teacher is with term papers. As we try to find the answer to this mysterious puzzle, you just keep eating like you thought it tasted like real food.

Coventry High School after hours . . . What's it like? Who's around? Is there anyone watching you? And just what is that strange beeping noise coming from the intercom system. You see, this is the hangout of all the socially deprived high school students who have nothing better to do than extracurricular activities. You may even see something you don't during the school day. Unknown people roaming the halls with various strange devices. Are they a strange alien race? No, they are the hard working janitorial staff who keep the school clear of debris. Don't worry about being in the building after hours, there's always someone watching . . . Ha ha ha!

A Long Way to Go

It's the end of our freshmen year and if we think back when we first stepped up to CHS some of us entered without hesitation while others took a second look. We didn't have any time to even think about the transfer and already we were referred to as high school students. As ninth graders, we had to undertake a great number of responsibilities. There was never enough time to participate in all the activities we wanted to and therefore we were forced to pick and choose. Now that we have succeeded in a year of high school life, we are prepared for what is to come next year.

Freshmen

President: Melissa Paiva
Melissa has to start her class into their years at CHS. She must prepare her class for coming events, such as the Freshmen Dance.

Advisor: Patricia Corso
Hopes to bring the freshmen class to a great year of memories. And gives her time freely to the elected officials of the freshmen class.

Class Officers: Vice President Melanie Malloy, Secretary Trish Tremblay, Student Council Rep. Torie Moore, Treasurer Michael Kendra

Social Committee: Jennifer Meriano, Jennifer Bradford, Kim Darigan, Bryan Hayes, Julia Crawley, Kristen Nester, Denise Boulanger, Susan Baxter, Heather McArdle

Along with the president of the freshmen class, the officers and social committee will work hard to get their class started into their high school years. They have taken a pledge to the class of 96 to make it the most memorable year of their lives.
