No Turning Back

Coventry students have a variety of interests and aspirations. Here we see Jen Cook living up to her name. Joe Roch and Amy Barlow show their dramatic abilities. CHS students are always prepared to smile. Underclassmen are often forced to ride the buses to get to school on time.
Coventry High, fasten your seat-belts for a journey into time through the 1997-1998 school year. As we travel through time we first see our freshmen, with their gleaming faces entering our the school for the first time. They eagerly try to learn the time table and rotation of periods. Then we meet our new assistant principal, Mr. Canole, and a few brand-new, fresh, teachers, also new additions to our school. The 1998 senior class is comfortable with the old atmosphere of the school and are prepared for the memories to come. They quickly adjust to the new time schedule and the new parking policies. The hallways are theirs, or at least they try to control the heavy traffic of the underclassmen. The freshmen have their locker sized back packs and usually take up most of the space, making those behind them late for class. Time may fly by for those always trying to get a head. But for those on top of things, only time will tell what will happen next.

CHS students find a way to be happy despite the rainy Homecoming weather. Kim Johnson seems pleasantly surprised by the camera. Lisa Ferretti, Derrick McLaughlin, Ryan Hall, Kendra Lonquist and Heather Piasczyk were there to welcome the new freshmen class.
Jodi “Pez” Pesatauro and Kerri “Hack” Hachadorian intimidated their opponents with war paint. Apparently, it worked, Lady Oakers Soccer won the championship. Steve Matteson gives the camera a sweet and innocent glance. Morgan Houck, Kendra Crowley, Jessica Pitochelli, and Derrick McLaughlin are all proud of the success of the school store.

The Freshmen class had a roof over their heads to protect them from the downpour. Sam Stevens says, “You can take my picture, just NOT when I’m eating!” Sorry, too late Sam.
Sue Colucci and Lara Gast show their school spirit. The Junior class float had a football theme, it's too bad our football team didn't. The Seniors always have the most fun at Homecoming. It must be the three years of experience in planning.

These three sophomores knew where the most attention could be attracted! John George, Nick Foehr, Dave Chianese and Keith Peterson know how to bundle up.
Like time through the hour glass...

months fly by and CHS students find themselves thrown into the future. The past is like a shadow—never very far from us. Referring to memories, students look at their accomplishments and are proud. Those who had the luxury of time to lounge around, listened to WCVY. While others, like the JROTC and class office holders, meet to enrich their futures. DECA goes the distance for those who are in need, while the yearbook staff records the past for students to look back on in the future. Our student athletes take home championships and state titles. At the same time, students make friends that will last the test of time. With all sorts of students, with all different backgrounds, CHS is a great foundation for the future. Time may move on but memories never go away.

Stacey Emmett and Jeanne LaMontagne have high spirits while they try to keep the balloons from popping. Shaun Hennessey takes time out of his busy schedule of joking around to smile for the camera. Jonathon Ayliffe-Jessop cries, “I’m wet, I’m cold, hug me!”
So many memories have been compacted into such a short time. From the start, as Seniors, we were hit with some changes. First, the new time. Of course, that would be changed too. Then the administration tried to levy a $5.00 parking fee. We were outraged. Originally by the shock, then by the way some of our classmates behaved. The administration changed their minds and the parking fee was revoked. Then it finally hit us that we were SENIORS!! It was our last year and we better make the best of it. Many activities occupied our time. From various clubs to numerous sports. From all the school work we had to college applications and making plans for our future. Our Senior year was packed, but we found time for fun. After all the applications were sent out and deadlines met, dances and romances filled our last days at Coventry High School. Finally, our name was called and we walked across that stage. It would be our last chance to look back at all the kids that were with us for so long of a time. We would now be embarking on our own separate journeys through time. There was no turning back now.

Seniors come in all sizes and shapes and span the spectrum of talents and interests. It is variety that makes life and a class interesting. Robert O'Leary is talented at both tool making and football. Our class president, Melissa Turelli, never stops working. Melissa Giroux keeps her sense of humor while trying to solve a problem in her Psychology project.

An Enchanting Evening for All

The Junior Prom for the class of 1998 was held on April 25, 1997, at the Rhodes On The Pawtuxet. Luxury limosines, elegant cars, horse and buggies and the occasional “rust bucket” escorted students to the dance in style. Shimmering gowns and formal tuxedos were noticed from all around. Photographers happily took everyone’s photos. After the picture taking fiasco was finished, the receiving line began. Hands were shook and favors passed out. Still, the night had just begun. Dinner was served around 8:30 and everyone was starved... except those who knew what was to come. Dinner consisted of somewhat boneless chicken, rice pilaf (yes, that’s what that was!), and salad. After, when everyone thought they “couldn’t eat another bite”, ice cream with strawberries was served. Dancing began and the Prom Queen, Kristy McCoy was crowned. As the night was coming to a close, couples came together to dance the last song of their Junior Prom. Juniors left that night with mystical memories of their Enchanted Evening.

Becky Gliottone and Matt Ferrara show just how excited they truly are about the prom. Shaun Hennessey and Jenn Barrett take a moment out of their dancing to pose for a photo. Parents always insist on taking pre-prom pictures! Here we have Jeff Kendra, Julie Doucette, Rachel Scanlon, and John Calise forcing fake smiles for their parents.
Ryan Hollis is the first to congratulate Kristy McCoy. Some Juniors take a breather from all the dancing. Artie Souza and his date dance close for the last song of the night. Kendra Crowley and Tom Mulligan look exhausted by the end of the night. Sara Roch and John Skaling exchange secrets about their plans for after the dance.
Tammy Schneider, Amy DeGraide and Beth Dlugos forget about eating lunch and decide to cram for a math test. Ralph Supper goes for extra credit points in psychology by swallowing the right hemisphere of a sheep’s brain... poor sheep!

What is Adam Legein so excited about? Could it be the return of the baseball season? Fixing computers and electronics equipment comes second nature to Elizabeth Prudencio. Allen Peabody shows his more serious side during psychology as the class prepares to compare the human brain with sheep brains.

Tom Butts is one of the seniors involved in the skatepark. I wonder what Tony Vigneau is dreaming about? Alena Chabot, Liz and Nico Clift stand patiently in the long lunch line.
In late August of 1994, this year’s senior class, numbering well over 400, stormed through the gates of Coventry High. Our time had come and we were ready to make our mark. As Freshmen we chose Nico Clift to be our fearless leader. There was now no turning back. Although nervous and a little scared, we forged our way through the over crowded corridors, desperately tried to open new lockers, and somehow made to class right when the bell was about to ring. With veteran teachers like, Ms. Balentine, Mr. Morin, and Mr. Thomp­son, Freshman year eem d to fly by. However, it would not be complete without the long awaited and most an­tiCipated event of that year, the Fresh­man Semi-Formal. That’s right, getting dressed up to dance in the aromatic, luxurious, school cafeteria.

It was finally over, the dreaded first year of high school was done. We were Sophomores, no longer the last ones on the totem poll. Although not quite upper-classmen, we were slowly but surely making our way to the top. This year Jennifer Barrett was selected as president of our class. With her help and the dedica­tion of our class officers, social committee, and sophomore class advisor, Mr. Erinakes, our class was ready to leave their mark. As well as having the tradi­tional sophomore lock-in, which included sumo wrestling, human bowling, and hyp­notist Frank Sanotos, our class, feeling deprived of a formal dance, decided to invent our own. Unlike the Freshman dance, the sophomore semi-formal would take place in an actual restaurant, namely Evelyn’s Villa. Hors d’oeuvres were served, pictures were taken, and memo­ries were made. It was a nice way to end our second year at Coventry High.

On August 28, 1996, we entered Coventry High with a new name, Upper Classmen. It was a well deserved honor. As well as having a new class president, named Ryan Hollis, the school also had acquired a new principal, Mr. Wilkinson, the former student services head, took the reigns from recentlyretired Mr. Margarian. With newly acquired licenses in hand we were ready to go. Vo-Tech was now available to eager juniors, and future careers choices were being made. During this year, our Wrestling team were state ch­ampions, again, and our boy’s volleyball team made to the championship game against North Kingston. Towards the end of the year other momentous occasions occurred. On April 5, our Junior prom, A night to Remember, was held at the beautiful, Rhodes-on the Pawtuxet. Kristi Macoy became our Queen. We struggled through the SAT’s, and were rewarded by a very sad, yet exciting Class Day, which took place on June 6. As soon as we turned our rings we new, the time had finally arrived. We officially seniors!!

On August 28, 1997, we entered Coventry High as the ruling class. Melissa Turilli took over as our class president and we were ready to go. Although busy filling out college and scholarships applications, we did manage to have some fun. Although torrential rain tried to dampen our spirits during homecoming, we all stuck together and made it a complete suc­cess. The winter ball, the last snowfall, was held at the West Valley Inn on January 23, and was a great way to bring in the new year. Our senior year was now half over. Class day occurred on May 22, and although a terribly sad time for most, it was a great day to reminisce. The long awaited Senior ball took place on May 15, at the Newport Marriot. AtSenior supper we received our red and white gowns, as well as our last yearbook of Coventry High. On June 6, 1998, we walked across the stage at the Musical Theater to receive our diplomas. Our time had come, and their was now no turning back!

So many things to do and so little time in which to do them. This sums up the Junior year. As upper classmen, we are expected to be role models, yet we have so much growing up to do ourselves and many decisions to make. This is the year we make serious career choices. Many of us enter West Bay and begin a two-year vocational technical program. We, also, take the SAT’s and begin to research colleges. Class work becomes more rigorous as the faculty gives us a taste of what the adult world will be like. Before we know it, the Winter Ball is here. This is our last social event with the Senior Class. As spring approaches, plans for the Junior Prom are finalized. When the big night arrives, we realize we have reached a milestone. The Junior Prom will be our last social event before we become the senior class. On class day, we honor and say good-bye to the Class of '97. We have arrived. With the passing of the gavel and turning over of our rings, the Junior year ends and we become the new seniors, the Class of '99.

Looks like Shawn Nolan and friends are one big happy family. David Patenaude heard that practice makes perfect.

Ben Jutras and friends, try to act suave while being photographed during lunch. Ryan Hall, on the other hand, thinks he is ready to be put on the cover of GQ.
Ben Jutras seems as though he is being drawn to the music room by an outside force, while a fellow student is contemplating just how many bricks it took to build the school. Phil Kreuger tries to convince everyone that he is the best saxophone player in the world.

Our Time is Almost Here.

Laughter is not confined to the outside world. It can happen in class. Just ask Brian Marandola.

Adam Guindon stares off to the left, hoping that he will get through the period without being called upon.

Sara Olson carefully looks over her exam. She has a definite look of confidence about the quality of her work.
Lucas Klein relaxes and rests after taking notes for most of the period. The pencil behind his ear indicates class is almost over.

Faces and posture tell us a lot about people. Scott Petrarca is calm and content with small smile and crossed arms.

Rachel Austin, on the other hand, appears to be deep in thought and trying to find an elusive answer to a question.
Jennifer Mageau looks happy and confident. She is prepared and ready to take today's exam.

Kerri Wise, with notebook open, awaits the beginning of class. There will be many notes to take today.

Jan Rollins looks up at the board to make sure that the formula he is writing in his notebook is correct and complete.
Colin Black is ready for work today. You can tell that history is one of his favorite subjects by the big smile on his face.

Who said that school is all work and no fun. Just look at the expression on Chris Lafrenaye.

Apparently learning can be fun. What else can explain the expressions on the faces of Chris LaChance and Renee Hammond.

The period is almost over and the weekend is ready to begin. No wonder Josh Sutton and Ryan Palmiere are so happy.

Why are Kristina Cannon and Allison Blackmore so happy? Could it be that they know we will eventually have a snow day this year.
Pencils and pens also tell us something about students. Nicloe Hattoy is deep in thought, biting on the end of her pen.

Jacob Bruns, on the other hand, is relaxed and taking his test in stride. Note the calm manner in which he holds his pen.

Chris Pucino is very intense. Note the position of pen and hand. The answer will eventually surface after some concentration.

There are many moods in the classroom. Vanessa Amaral appears to be saying that she would prefer to be doing something else, but she can’t.

Sherri Scallon doodles in her notebooks. This is a way to collect her thoughts during a break in the class.

Alonzo Williams is doing what everyone loves to do, work on the chalk board. He is hoping that his answer will be right.
Everyone gets distracted occasionally in class. This happened to Alison Kelley, while yearbook candid shots were being taken.

Attention is the key to success. If your mind wanders, you may miss out on important class notes. Dan Demers and Ryan Palmieri do not want that to happen to them.

Nikki Ware studies her map during history class. She is looking for the places mentioned in her study guide.
What motivates juniors? Is it the desire to be happy? Shannon Feeney answers yes, with a resounding smile.

Kim would say passing her subjects and getting ready for a career after high school.

Deanna Gomes is one the bilingual students this year. She adds a cultural dimension to her classes.
Mark Weinsierl goes in for the casual look with his T-shirt. The long hair, combined with beard and mustache set him apart from the crowd.

Short hair, jeans, and sweat-shirt are part of the panorama of Oaker style. Craig Riley is a good example of this. You will find almost every style at CHS.

Style is important to juniors. Their clothes and hair styles mean a lot to them. Jason Arcoraci and Dan Mello sport different hair lengths.
Jen Haigh flexes her muscles and it is not even gym class. She is excited about something. We wonder what it can be?

Richard Cacchiotti leans over to get some help from Mandy Brown. Apparently her notes are more complete than his.

What could Nicole Hatttoy be concocting? Could it be a new miracle cure for correcting and solving chemistry lab experiments.
Katie Pepper throws her hands up during class. Those complicated facts and figures seem to be getting to her.

Alicia Mahoney is waiting for the lunch break. She sneaks a glance at the clock to see how many more minutes to go.

Why is Mike Camera so happy. Its semester exam time. Can’t you tell?

Ms. Schwab’s English class gets ready to study for the semester exams. As you can tell they are enthusiastic.

Mike DeGraide’s attention is somewhere else. As class comes to an end his thoughts move on to something else.

Just look at those eyes. They penetrate the person Jason Fallon is looking at. We can only wonder what topic or concept could bring about this reaction.

Stephanie Solera wants to finish her work during class time. You can see the determination on her face. No home work tonight for Stephanie.
Jeremy Coutu erases the board as he prepares to present his solution to today's science problem to the class.

Why is Jessie Collins so happy and relaxed? The grueling double period semester exams begin next week.

Why is everyone so happy? This is supposed to be an exam, but Megan Doucette seems very confident and relaxed.

Allison Blackmore does not have a worry in the world. Look at the expression on her face. She has finished and put her work down on her desk and smiles with relief.

Erin Drought just stops and prepares to close her notebook. How come class is so relaxed when the yearbook photographer is there.

The Sophomore year is a very special time in the life of a high school student. You are no longer at the bottom of the rank, but are still a good distance from the top. This is the time to prove your capabilities to the teachers and the upperclassman. It's time to show everyone that you deserve a higher status, and you are not a freshman anymore. How do you do this? You do this by getting involved in studies, sports and extracurricular activities. In fact this is the year of involvement. You join so many sports and activities that you cannot keep up with them all. Eventually you settle down with those activities you like the most and those that you will stay with for the remainder of your high school career.

It's also a time to have fun. You don't have the worries of finding out the unknown, and you don't have the responsibilities of planning your future. Although the sophomore lock-in didn't exist this year, you can still look forward to the semi-formal and other social occasions. Your sophomore year is a time to mature and a time to make memories that should last a lifetime.

Look whos taking a break, Stephanie Gallo, Abbey Easterbrooks, and Abby Fogarty, as is Jessica Langlais. While Jason Foshey tries to carry a tune.

Mr. James Erinakes
Not only is Courtney Crone happy, but she is totally relaxed. This must be the new yoga position for learning.

Krystle Beaudoin’s joy is unmistakable. She can hardly contain her emotions. Her excitement is contagious and spread to the rest of the class.

Why are these people so happy and excited? Could it be that Stephanie Andersen is looking forward to semester exams?
Pam Maine, Desiree Andre and Danielle LaBranch surround Mr. Erinakes in class. You can tell they really enjoy math.

Preparation is the key to success. Eric McNeely positions his desk so that he will be able to see everything on the board.

Rick Coy does his morning stretching exercises. This helps him to unwind and remove any stress he may have at the beginning of a new school day.

Scott Erno has discovered a new method of taking notes and figuring out what the teacher will ask on the exams. Scott tells us your secret.
Each student reacts differently in the classroom. The range of emotions is wide. Amanda Costello has a big smile and is pleased with her work.

On the other hand, Justin Dugas relaxes in study after a long day. This is the time to unwind and put the day behind you.

Nothing can distract Joe Knott from his studies. He intently goes over his work, checking it for completeness before handing it in to be graded.

Joe Porter looks up confidently from his work, knowing he has grasped the full meaning of today’s class discussion.

Danny Case sits back and pauses for a few moments before going back to work on the semester exam.

Mr. Brissett smiles as watches Chris DiMicco and Rich Ratner discussing the difference between a liberal and a conservative.
Christine Fife wishes that school started later in the day. Getting started during the first period is so difficult.

Busy, busy, busy! Mike Petrarca races to finish the exam before the end of class. There are times when we wish classes were longer.
It seems that the pile of notebooks and textbooks continue to grow each year. Just ask Rebecca Champlin and Jessica Corbeil.

Ms. Swabb is getting her point across to Lara Gast. As you can see Lara is having a great time learning English.

Oakers wear a wide variety of designer clothes and sports ware, from Gap to Nike. Here, Steve Dupree sports the Adidas look.
Talk about being reserved and conservative. Rick Coy, sheds his shy, silent side, as he demonstrates to the class his true personality.

Kevin Neves gives us a nice smile as Steve Dupree breaks out laughing in the background. Steve is happy that he is not the center of the photo.

Katie Mellor has just closed her books. The period is about ready to end and she is preparing to make the long hike to her next class.
Time for a change of pace. Scott Knoll gets up to stretch and unwind as the period is about to end.

Jessica Cuminsky takes a moment to look over her notes. Mr. Brissett has kept her busy writing all period.

Joe Knott is trying very hard to avoid eye to eye contact with the yearbook camera. He pretends that we are not there, but we are.
Beth Atkins is obviously having a very good time in class. Something funny must have just happened to bring about this response.

Celina Gourd is also camera shy. She keeps hoping that we will go away and just leave her alone. Sorry, Celina, no such luck.

Frank Paolantonio is caught in the act of talking in class. Jesse Fratus is wondering who woke him up from his cat nap.

Dan Goodworth continues searching for the next answer in the reading; while Mary Baldo sits back content. Mary has already finished her assignment.

There are some people that you cannot get to smile and pose for the camera. Thankfully, Kendra Longquist is not one of them.
Super heroes are still alive and well. If you don’t believe us, check out the T-shirt on Jeremy Bent. Just who is that blue-clad character?

Some people have the ability to concentrate and block out all distractions. Derek Gould’s attention is riveted to his assignment.

Mike Cote and Jessica Brennan enjoy a moment of laughter. What could have triggered this type of response?

Ryan Belmore smiles for the camera - social studies is the place to be, right, Mr. Lyons.

Lynn Brinadamour, Toni Caprio, Amy Ferraz and Jodi-Lyn Pesaturo really enjoyed the break during class as our roving photographer took several candid shots.

History is obviously a lot of fun. Look at the thumbs up. Jason Saballa is signaling to his classmates.
Chris Dufour takes a moment to collect his thoughts. It has been a busy note taking day. You need that mini-break to restore your energy.

Some people have the ability to concentrate and block out all distractions. Just ask Derek Gould.

History is very enjoyable to Josh Chiarini. What else could possible trigger such a smile?
The simple raising of the hand is a sure way to get the teacher’s attention, while expressing an orderly way of interaction in the classroom setting.

Classroom situations bring about many responses. Some students flash big smiles; while others appear to be deep in thought.

Jen Lyons is having so much fun in her history class. By the looks of her smile, learning can be enjoyable as well as rewarding.
It is amazing what people will do to get into the yearbook. Just look at the facial expression on this student.

Jonathan Groleau pretends to looks just like the man on his shirt. What a contemplative pose.

No edition of the Knotty Oak would be complete without the sleeping photo of the unidentified student.

Karl, you should have attended more staff meetings and this photo would not have gotten in.
This is a big year for Freshmen. New doors will open and new opportunities arise. The freshman year is filled with exciting and different events, such as Spirit Week, Homecoming, and the Freshman Formal. It all begins on the first day of school when every student is appalled at the crowd of students and trying to find their homerooms. During homeroom they struggle trying to figure out their schedules, locate their lockers, fill out forms and get ready for their first class. Armed with the knowledge of odd and even days they make their way through the maze of corridors and reach their first class. By the end of first period, they are weighed down with books and homework, yes, there is even talk of a quiz for the next class. There is even talk about exams and papers. School has really begun. Lunch time arrives. The cafeteria is jammed and we have difficulty finding our friends. We realize there is nobody there we know. After lunch we headed for our last class. Only one more period and the day will be done. At 1:45 PM the bell rings - the day is over. We made it. We survived. Now, we are a part of Coventry High School!

During Freshman orientation, best friends Catherine McArkle and Kelly Rabbit, flash their pearly whites.

While in the lunch room, two of Coventry’s finest girl’s soccer players, Jen Ferrari, Natalie Coolen, smile away at the camera. Why are they so happy? Could it be that lunch time was their only chance to rest today.
While attending Freshman orientation during the summer, Erin Mulligan, Kayla Mutter and Pete take time to sit down and absorb all that they have learned.

The Class of 2001 has begun its career at CHS. The students attend their first assembly and are introduced to the staff and administration.

Prior to the opening of school, a series of step up days were held to orientate the freshmen to the building and the programs the high school has to offer.

Step up days were vigorous, consisting of a series of meetings with faculty, coaches and activities advisers. Graham Field takes a break from the action.
Looking for a place to find our friends, many of us located the library. We would be spending many hours here researching papers for our classes.

The first day was hectic. We made our way to home room and got our schedules. Amanda Falcone and Shannon Faye try to figure out their schedules.

Sitting and waiting became a part of our orientation day. Matt Maguire and Jessica Templeton sit in the cafeteria, awaiting instructions.
After home room we went to the auditorium. Gloriann Cruz listens intently to the principle, Mr. Wilkinson, explain rules and regulations.

Nothing phases some freshmen. Jen Ferrari smiles and relaxes. She is not intimidated by the size and scope of the high school.

The first class begins. Rochelle Tierney can't believe notes on the first day, while Dylon Bennett looks at the board to make sure he doesn't miss anything.

Library orientation is another experience. The librarians tell us what is available and how we can get the information we need to do our research.

Study is a new experience. Some of us actually have time to work on assignments during the day. With the amount of work we have, we need that time.

Settling down to the routine is easy for most of us. Amanda Falcone quickly adjusts to her new surroundings and gets down to work.
One of the first problems to conquer is how to get around the building. It can be confusing. Just ask Lori Teto, as she stands by the gym.

Nothing seems to bother Jay. He has located all of his classes and sits back, waiting for the bell to ring and send him on his way to his next room.

Making out a travel or library pass is different. There are different colors for different weeks and library passes have to be obtained before home room.

Raquel Card lets nothing bother her as she sits in the library enjoying a few moments of well earned peace and quiet and no notes to take.

Culture shock is part of the freshman experience. Teachers assign work, to include papers and exams on the first day. Just look at the expression on Bailey Fox.

Finally lunch time arrives. Shawn Hoxie just lets all the stress go as he sits and relaxes. There is still one more period to go.
